HackYeah 2026 · Kraków · Sport & Healthcare

MyCrohnie

A daily game that helps children with inflammatory bowel disease share how they feel, and helps families and doctors see the picture.

Team JoseoKings

01 · The problem

Children with IBD often do not say how they feel, so parents end up asking all the time.

Does your tummy hurt?

Did you go to the bathroom?

Does your tummy hurt?

Interrogation fatigue

01 · The problem

Visits are months apart, and when the doctor asks how those months went, nobody remembers.

Dr Elena

Paediatric gastroenterologist

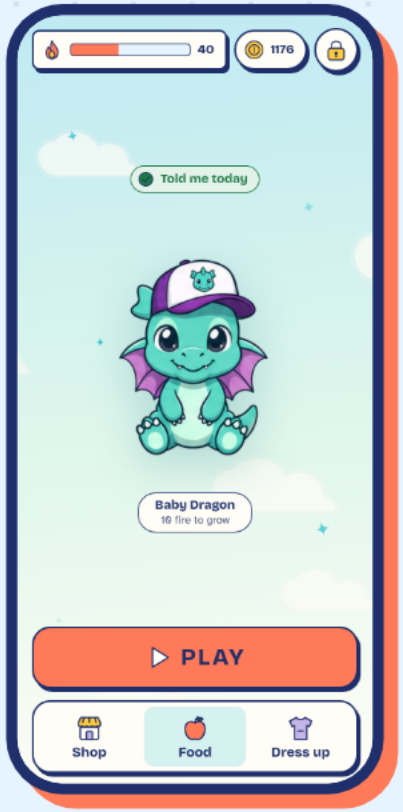

Sees Lucas every three months for twenty minutes.

Gets vague answers: “some days he walked”.

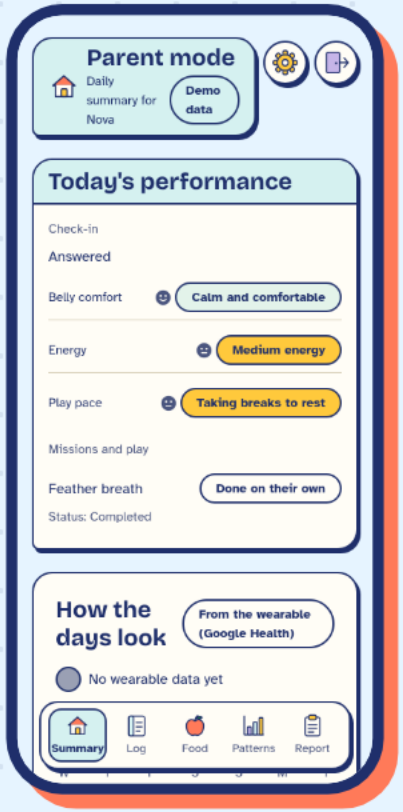

Fictional persona

02 · The solution

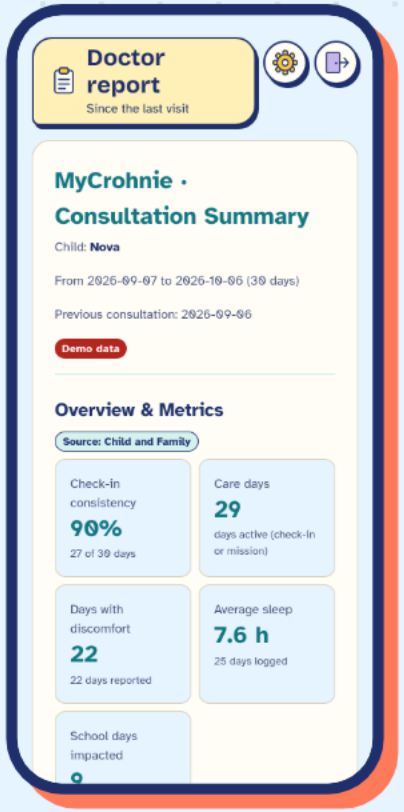

One shared device, two modes: the child plays, and parents and the doctor get an organised, honest summary.

Child mode

Parent mode (PIN)

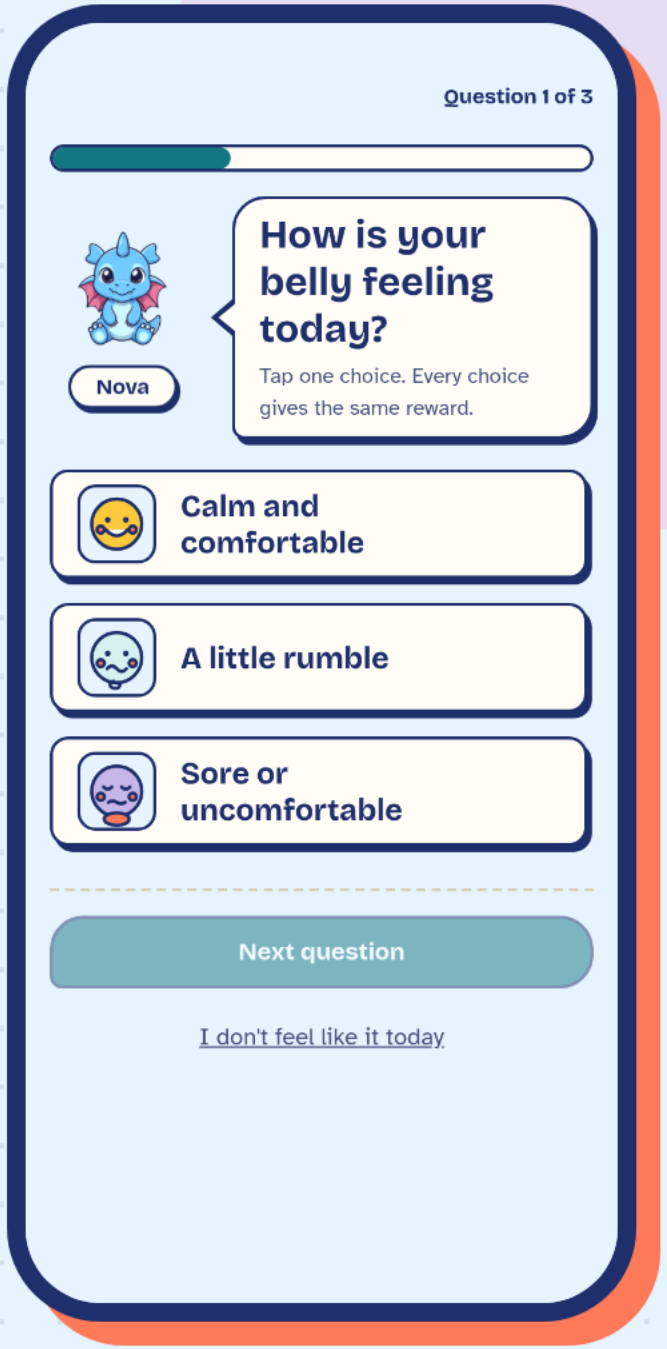

Doctor report

03 · Child mode

The child answers three questions with drawings, and “I don't feel like it today” is always valid.

- How is your belly feeling today?
- How is your energy today?
- How did you feel like moving today?
- Every choice gives the same reward.

03 · Child mode

A dragon companion guides short, gentle movement games, and stopping early counts as rest.

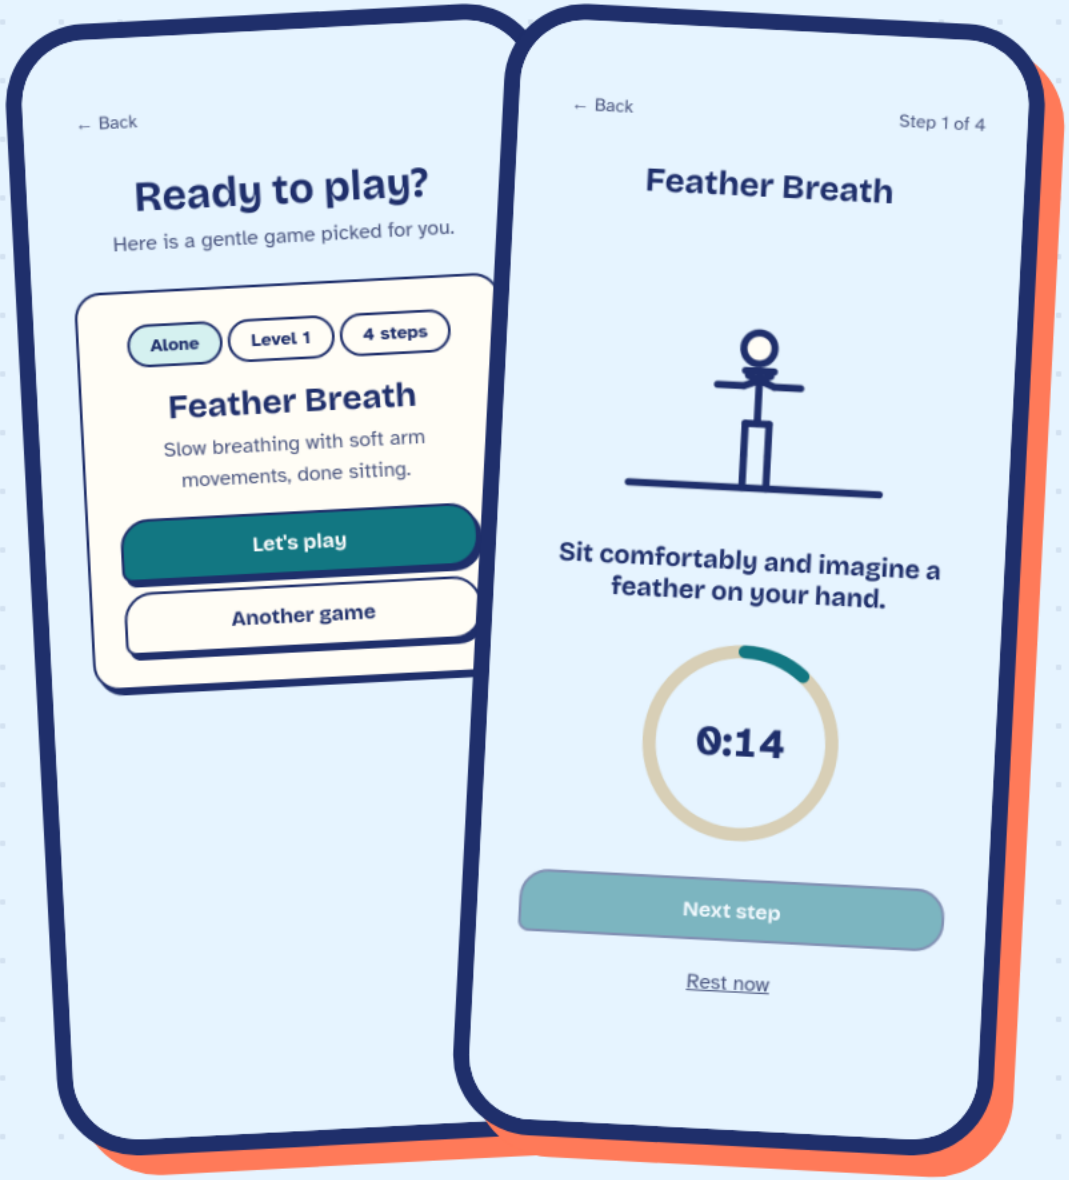

Breathing

Stretching

Balance

Alone or with family

No impact exercise

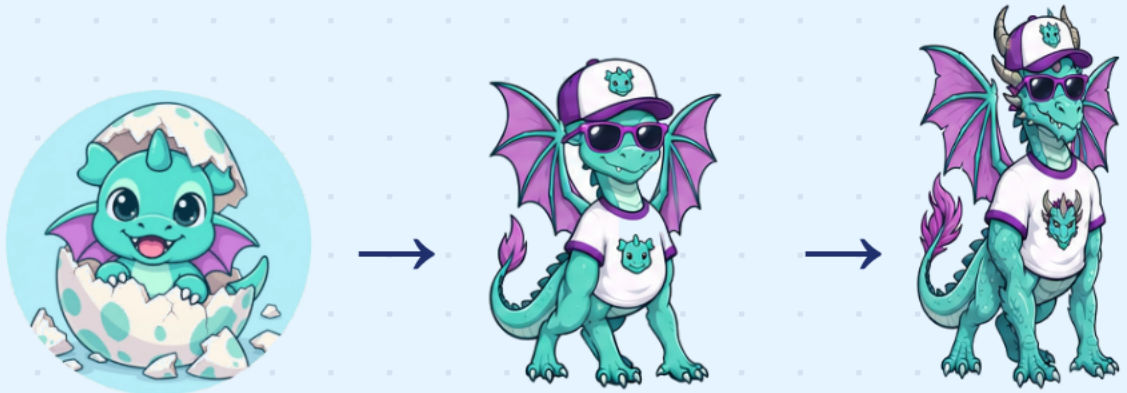

04 · Rewards

Rewards come from showing up, never from the answer, and progress only goes up.

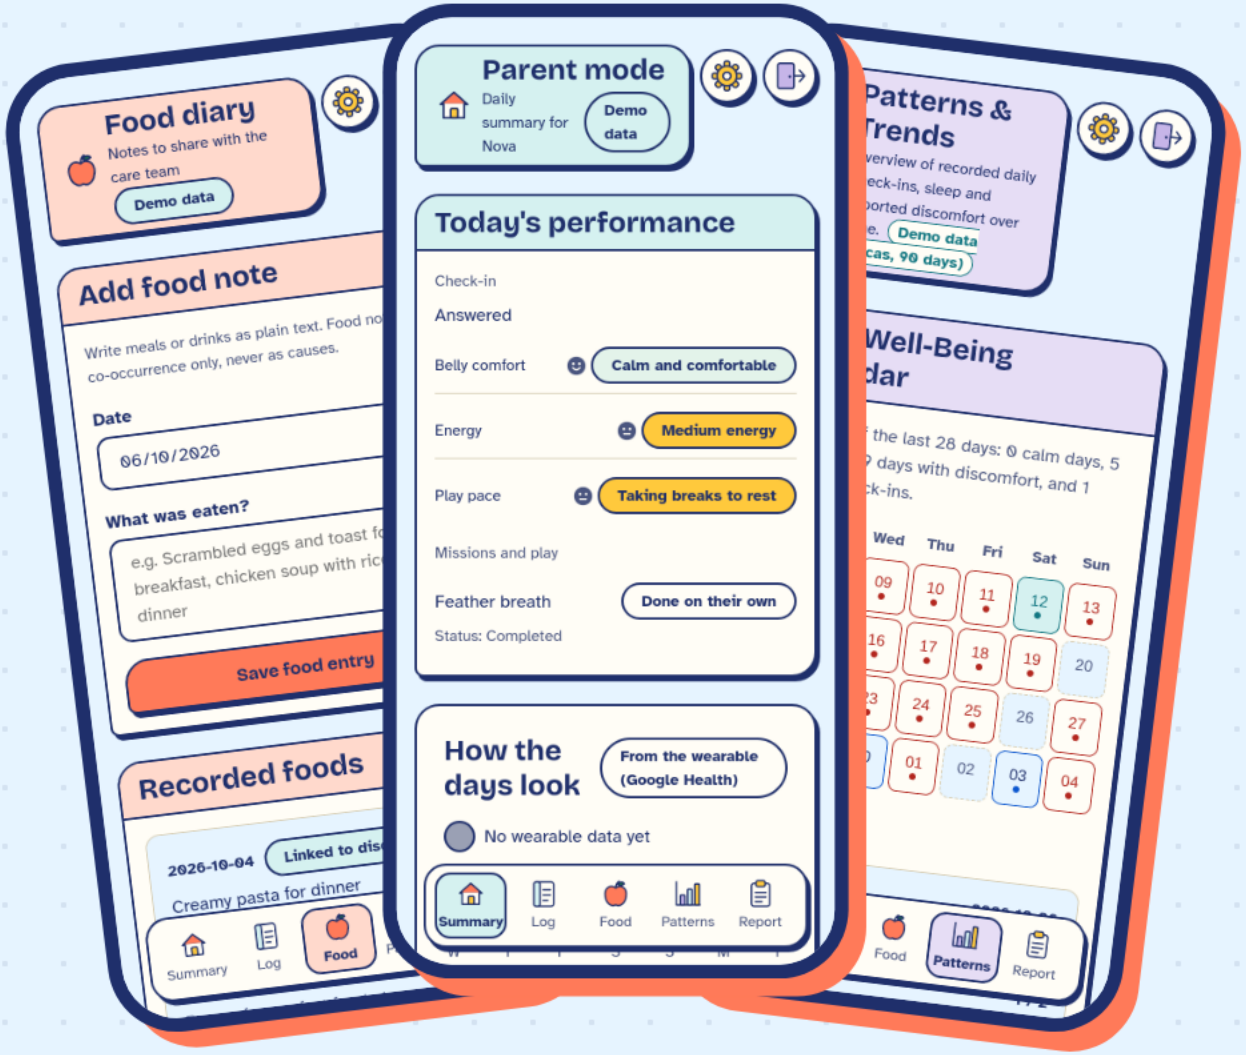

+12

- No streaks that break
- The dragon is never sad
- Fixed, predictable rewards

05 · Parent mode

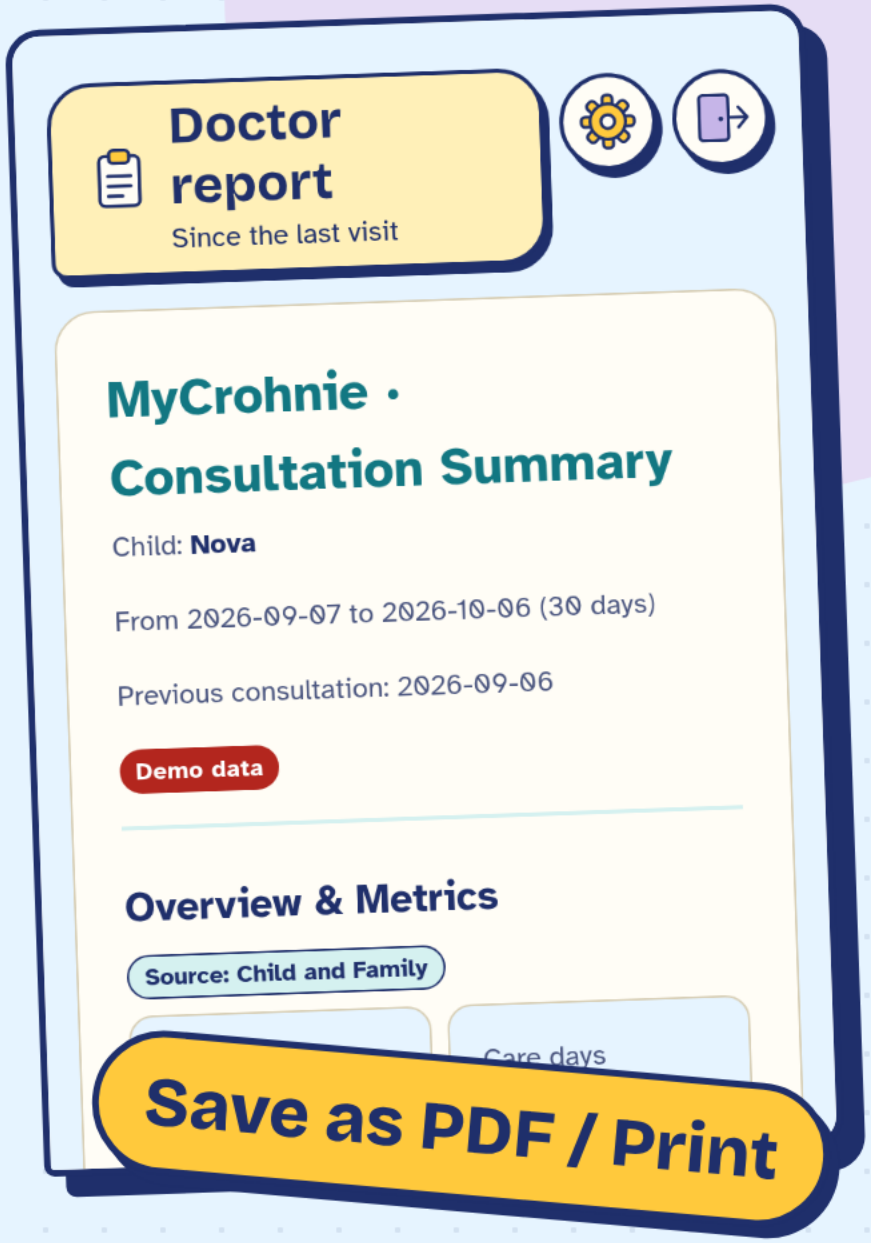

Parents get plain facts behind a PIN: a summary, a daily log, a food diary and patterns.

06 · Doctor report

The doctor gets one page since the last consultation, saved as PDF on the device.

- Days with discomfort
- Food entries on those days
- Sleep and school
- Active days

07 · Privacy and safety

Health data stays on the device, and the app never gives medical advice.

Data stays on the device.
No accounts, no analytics, no third parties.

No medical advice.
No diagnosis, no predictions, no scores.

Rewards never depend on answers.
Reward the act, never the numbers.

Honest data.
Demo data is always labelled.

mycrohnie.vercel.app

Try it in 2 minutes. No account and no setup needed.